Windows Forensic Artifact Analysis: Browser & System Correlation

Part A: Browser Artifacts & PII Analysis

In this phase of the investigation, we performed a deep-dive extraction of the Google Chrome user profile located at %localappdata%\Google\Chrome\User Data\Default\ . The objective was to identify user behavior, sensitive data exposure, and session persistence.

1. Browsing History & Download Logs

Using DB Browser for SQLite, the History database was analyzed.

- The history provides a chronological map of my academic and professional interests, specifically focusing on SZABIST portals and web development troubleshooting.
- The downloads table was cross-referenced to ensure that all files downloaded during the week (including the forensic tools themselves) were accounted for, ensuring no malicious files were introduced during the lab.
- Evidence: Exported to Chrome_History.csv.

2. Cache Analysis (ChromeCacheView)

We analyzed the Cache_Data folder to reconstruct recently viewed web content without needing an active internet connection.

- Metrics: A total of 4,002 items were identified.
- Timeline: The cache data covers a high-activity window from May 8 to May 13, 2026.
- Findings: Artifacts included JavaScript (.js) and image files from WhatsApp Web, LinkedIn, and McAfee. The presence of scripts from threat.api.mcafee.com confirms the active presence of security monitoring during browsing sessions.

3. Cookie & Session Persistence (ChromeCookiesView)

Cookies were extracted to determine the level of "Session Hijacking" risk.

- Metrics: 3,867 cookies were detected.
- Security Standard: Most cookies utilized v20 encryption, protecting the raw "Value" from immediate plain-text viewing.
- Findings: Multiple persistent trackers were identified, such as those from .Ocalc.com, with expiration dates extending into 2027. This indicates long-term tracking of the user's browsing habits.

4. Web Data & PII Exposure

The Web Data SQLite file was audited for Personally Identifiable

Information (PII) that a browser "remembers."

- Findings: The `address_type_tokens` table revealed a high-risk exposure of the user's identity.
- Identified Data: * Full Name: Haris Zamir.
 - Email: bscs2312220@szabist.pk.
 - Phone: A local Karachi mobile number.
 - Location: Residential address in Grey Garden, Karachi.
- Risk Assessment: An attacker with local access could use this data for targeted phishing or physical social engineering.

Part B: System Artifacts & External Storage

Part B shifted the focus from software behavior to hardware interaction and system-level file access records.

1. USB Connection History (USBDeview)

We audited the Windows Registry to identify every external device that has interacted with the system's ports.

- Primary Artifact: A Kingston DataTraveler 3.0 USB drive was identified.
- Unique ID: Serial Number 1C6F65CF6156B11.... This is the "fingerprint" of the device.
- Secondary Device: A realme C53 smartphone was connected on May 4, 2026.
- Infrastructure: Evidence of VMware USB devices confirms the use of virtualized environments for security testing.

2. File Interaction via JumpLists (JumplistView)

Jumplists were used to track "User Intent"—proving which files were actually opened by the user.

Development Activity: Evidence of the user accessing `.env` and `.php` files within `C:\xampp\htdocs\my-app\`. In forensics, accessing `.env` files is a significant event as they often contain sensitive credentials.

Academic Correlation: Access to University-related PDFs (e.g., `0ses1Introduction.pdf`) was documented, matching the browsing history.

Part C: Execution Analysis & Timeline Reconstruction

Part C serves as the "Proof of Action," correlating all previous artifacts into a definitive timeline.

1. Application Execution (WinPrefetchView)

Prefetch files were analyzed to prove how many times specific applications were run.

- Evidence of Use: * ACROBAT.EXE: Run 24 times, confirming extensive reading of the forensic briefs and university PDFs.
 - ANYDESK.EXE: Run 25 times, showing a history of remote support or access dating back to late 2025.
 - Forensic Audit Trail: The execution of USBDEVIEW.EXE and other tools today confirms the intern's active audit process.

2. Final Forensic Timeline

Date	Artifact Source	Observation
May 4, 2026	USBDeview	Mobile device connected for data transfer/charging.
May 6, 2026	USBDeview	Kingston USB Drive utilized for external storage.
May 10, 2026	Prefetch	Document viewer executed to review academic materials.
May 13, 2026	JumpLists	Technical development on Laravel/PHP project files.
May 14, 2026	History/Cache	Full forensic audit conducted; 4,002 cache items analyzed.

Conclusion

The forensic extraction and analysis conducted throughout Week 09 underscores a fundamental reality of modern endpoint security: the browser is the most significant repository of user identity on a system. While traditional operating system artifacts (Prefetch and JumpLists) successfully documented the mechanical actions of the user—such as running Adobe Acrobat or connecting a Kingston flash drive—it was the browser audit that provided the contextual identity. The discovery of clear-text PII and thousands of persistent tracking cookies highlights a critical vulnerability where a simple physical compromise can lead to a total identity takeover.
